

This map illustrates the first phase of a bypass project. A prominent red line traces a route that starts at the bottom center, moves east, then curves north and west to bypass a densely populated urban area on the left. The route ends at the top center. Yellow rectangular markers are placed along the red line, indicating specific locations or points of interest. The map features a detailed street network in blue, with a higher density of streets in the urban area on the left. The surrounding landscape is mostly open, with some scattered buildings and fields.
